

Traditional Wedding Honoree List

- ☐ An emcee for the chupah ceremony
- ☐ A cantor, or any man with a pleasant voice, to incant the various hymns sung beneath the chupah
- ☐ Two witnesses for the betrothal
- ☐ One who reads the ketubah aloud
- ☐ Six men to recite the Sheva Brachot beneath the chupah
- ☐ One who leads the Grace after Meals following the wedding reception
- ☐ Six men to recite the Sheva Brachot which follows the Grace after Meals

In many communities it is customary to sign the tenai'im (engagement contract) and/or the ketubah (marriage contract) by the prenuptial reception. This presents a few more opportunities for delegating honors:

- ☐ Two guarantors to sign the tenai'im
- ☐ Two witnesses to sign the tenai'im
- ☐ One who reads the tenai'im aloud by the prenuptial reception
- ☐ Two witnesses to sign the ketubah

Other:

At Chabad weddings, the text of the letter which the Rebbe would customarily send to every bride and groom is read beneath the chupah

- ☐ One who reads the Rebbe's letter

Some have the custom of requesting a designated representative Kohain (priest) -- to bless the bride and groom with the Priestly Blessing.

- ☐ A Kohain to administer the Priestly Blessing

It should be noted that while these are the standard honors delegated during the wedding, many have ingeniously found many other opportunities throughout the wedding ceremony and reception to honor additional guests. Be a trend setter; start your own wedding tradition!
