HALAKHA

What does he do with her – בּיצִד עוֹשֶׁה לָּה. The husband states before his local court: I warned my wife not to seclude herself with so-and-so, and she then secluded herself with him, and these are the witnesses. She claims that she is undefiled, and I want her to be evaluated by drinking the bitter water. The court then hears the testimony of the witnesses. If their testimony is accepted, the court provides two Torah scholars to accompany the husband and wife on their journey to the Temple, in order to prevent them from engaging in sexual intercourse on the way (Rambam Sefer Nashim, Hilkhot Sota 3:1).

NOTES

But on the way, unless there are three – שְּלְשָׁה. The commentaries offer several reasons for the requirement that there be an additional man during travel. First, on a long journey it is inevitable that one of them will need to relieve himself and will probably distance himself from the man and woman, so as to have privacy. Second, while in the city, if one man needs to leave for some time, the second man can leave as well, thereby avoiding seclusion with the woman; but on the road there is nowhere for the other man to go. Even if there were a way for the second man to distance himself from the woman, he would not do so out of fear for the woman's safety (Devar Shaul).

the case where there are witnesses for her in a country overseas who can testify that she engaged in sexual intercourse, when the bitter water will not evaluate her faithfulness. Therefore, Rabbi Shimon should be concerned that such a dispensation will result in the defamation of the untainted women who drank and were unaffected, as people will view them as guilty women who were not affected because there were witnesses overseas.

לֵא שָׁכִיחַא.

The Gemara answers: The case of witnesses in a country overseas is not common, and therefore no one will assume that that is the reason why the woman was not affected. By contrast, a woman having merit is common.

מתני ביצד עושה לָה? מוּלִיכָה לְבֵית דִּין שֶּבְאוֹתוֹ מָקוֹם, ומוֹסְרִין לוֹ שְנֵי תַלְמִידֵי חֲכָמִים, שֶׁבָּא יָבֹא עֶלֶיהָ בַּדֶּרֶךְ, רַבִּי יְהוּדָה אוֹמֵר: בַּעְלָה נאמו עליה MISHNA The mishna details the procedure for administering the drinking of the bitter water of a sota. What does her husband do with her<sup>H</sup> after she secluded herself with the man about whom she had been warned? He brings her to the court that is found in that location, and the court provides him with two Torah scholars to accompany him, lest he engage in sexual intercourse with her on the way to the Temple, which is not only prohibited but will also prevent the bitter water from evaluating her. Rabbi Yehuda says: Her husband is trusted with regard to her, so there is no need to provide scholars to accompany him.

גמ' הְרֵי וְאִיהוּ - הָא הְלָתָא. לֵימָא מְסַיֵּיע לֵיהִ לְרַב, דְּאָמֵר רַב יְהוּדְה מְסַיֵּיע לֵיה לְרַב, דְּאָמֵר רַב יְהוּדְה אָמֵר רַב: לֹא שָנוּ אֶלָּא בְּעִיר, אֲבָל בַּדֶּירֶךְ - עַד דְּאִיכָּא שְלשָׁה, שֶׁמָּא יִיצְטַרְךְ אֶחָד מַהֶּן לִנְקְבָיו, וְנִמְצָא אֶחָד מַהָּן לִנְקְבָיו, וְנִמְצָא אֶחָד מַהן מתייחד עם הערוה!

GEMARA The Gemara assumes that the requirement for there to be two Torah scholars is to avoid the prohibition against a woman being alone with a man. The Gemara notes: Two additional men and he, the husband, are three people altogether. Let us say that this mishna supports the opinion of Rav, as Rav Yehuda says that Rav says: When they taught that it is permitted for a woman to be secluded with two men, they taught that this is permitted only in the town (see Kiddushin 80b). But on the way, when traveling, this is not permitted unless there are three<sup>N</sup> men with the woman. The reason for this stringency is that if there are only two men with her, perhaps one will need to relieve himself and will seek privacy, and it will be found that one of them is in seclusion with a woman forbidden to him.

א, הָבֶא הַיְינוּ טַעְמָא, בִּי הֵיכִי 'לֵיהַווּ עַלִיה סְהַדִי. The Gemara refutes this assumption: No, here, in the case of a sota, this is the reason why there is a requirement for two scholars, so that there are two witnesses with regard to her, i.e., there will be two witnesses to testify in the event that the husband engages in sexual intercourse with her on the way to the Temple. The reason is not to avoid the prohibition against her being alone with a man, as one scholar would suffice for that.

תַלְמִידֵי חֲכָמִים אִין, כּוּלֵי עָלְמָא לָא. לֵימָא מְפַיִּיע לֵיה לְאִידָךְ דְּרַב, דְּאָמַר רַב יְהוּדָה אָמַר רַב: לֹא שָנוּ אֶלָּא כְּשֵׁרִין, אֲבָל פְּרוּצִין – אֲפִילוּ עֲשָׂרָה נַמִי לָא. מעשה היה והוציאוּה עשרה במטה!

The mishna teaches that the husband is provided with Torah scholars. The Gemara further comments: Torah scholars, yes; anyone else, no. It is specifically Torah scholars who are provided to accompany the husband and wife. Let us say that this mishna supports another statement of Rav, as Rav Yehuda says that Rav says: When they taught that it is permitted for a woman to be secluded with two men, they taught that this is permitted only with regard to men of fit morals. But with regard to those of loose morals, she may not be secluded even with ten men. The Gemara adds: There was an incident and ten men carried out a woman on a bier, as if she were dead, and engaged in sexual intercourse with her.

לָא. הָכָא הַוְינוּ טַעְמָא, דְּיָדְעִי לְאֵתְרוּיֵי ביה

The Gemara refutes this assumption: No, here, in the case of a sota, this is the reason why there is a requirement for two scholars, that they know how to properly warn him<sup>N</sup> not to engage in sexual intercourse with her. Therefore, this mishna does not support the opinion of Rav.

יַרבִּי יְהוּדָה אוֹמֵר: בַּעְלָה״ וכו'. תַּנְאַ, רַבִּי יְהוּדָה אוֹמֵר: בַּעְלָה נֶאֶכָן מִקַּל וְחוֹמֶר, וּמַה נָּדָה שָׁהִיא בְּכָרַת – בַּעְלָה נֶאֶכָן עליה, סוֹטה שהיא בלאו – לא כּל שבּן! עליה, סוֹטה שהיא בלאו – לא כּל שבּן!

§ The Gemara now discusses Rabbi Yehuda's statement in the mishna. Rabbi Yehuda says: Her husband is trusted with regard to her. It is taught in a baraita in the Tosefta (1:2): Rabbi Yehuda says: Her husband is trusted due to an a fortiori inference: And just as in the case of a menstruating woman, who is prohibited from engaging in sexual intercourse with her husband by penalty of karet, her husband is nevertheless trusted with regard to her, as he is permitted to seclude himself with her, so too, with regard to a sota, who is prohibited from engaging in sexual intercourse with her husband only by penalty of a prohibition, is it not all the more so that he should be trusted?

וְרָבָּנֵן? הִיא הַנּוֹתֶנֶת: נֶדָּה דְּכֶרַת – חֲמִירָא לֵיה וּמְהֵימֵן, סוֹטָה דְּלָאו – לָא חֲמִירָא לֵיה וָלָא מָהֵימֵן. And the Rabbis say: That provides support for the contrary opinion, as these considerations lead to the opposite conclusion. A menstruating woman is forbidden by penalty of karet. This is a stringent prohibition for him, and this is why he is trusted not to engage in sexual intercourse with her. By contrast, a sota is forbidden to him only by a prohibition. This is not a stringent prohibition to him, and he is therefore not trusted with her.

וְרֵבִּי יְהוּדָה מִקַּל נְחוֹמֶר מַיְיתֵי לָהּ? וְהָא רַבִּי יְהוּדָה מִקְּרָאֵי מַיְיתֵי לָהּ! דְּתַנְיָא: ״וְהַבִּיא הָאִישׁ אֶת אִשְׁתּוֹ אֶל הַכּהַן״ – מִן הַתּוֹרָה הָאִישׁ מֵבִיא אֶת אִשְׁתּוֹ, אֲבָל אָמְרוּ חֲכָמִים: מוֹסְרִין לוֹ שְׁנֵי תַּלְמִיבִי חַכָמִים, שָׁמֵּא יָבֹא עַלֵּיהַ בַּדֵּרֶךְ. The Gemara asks: And does Rabbi Yehuda in fact derive this halakha from an a fortiori inference? But Rabbi Yehuda derives it from a verse, as it is taught in a baraita: The verse: "Then shall the man bring his wife to the priest" (Numbers 5:15), teaches that by Torah law the man alone brings his wife to the Temple, but the Sages said: The court provides him with two Torah scholars to accompany him, lest he engage in sexual intercourse with her on the way to the Temple.

רַבִּי יוֹפֵי אוֹמֵר: בַּעְלֶה נָאֶמָן עָלֶיהָ מִקַּל וָחוֹמֶר, וּמֵה נִּדָּה שֶׁהִיא בְּלֵבת – בַּעְלֶה נָאֱמָן עָלֶיהָ, סוֹטָה שֶׁהִיא בְּלָאו – לֹא כָּל שֶׁבֵּן! The baraita records a second opinion. Rabbi Yosei says: Her husband is trusted with regard to her based on an a fortiori inference: And just as a menstruating woman, who is prohibited from engaging in sexual intercourse with her husband by penalty of karet, and her husband is nevertheless trusted with regard to her, then with regard to a sota, who is prohibited from engaging in sexual intercourse with her husband by penalty of only a prohibition, should he not all the more so be trusted?

אֶמְרוּ לוֹ: לֹא, אִם אָמַרְתָּ בְּנָדָּה – שֶׁבֵּן יֵשׁ לָה הָיתֵר, תאמֵר בְּסוֹטָה שֶׁאֵין לָה היתר? ואומר: ״מים גנובים ימתקו״ וגו״. The Sages said to him: No, if you say that this is true with regard to a menstruating woman, the reason he is trusted is not due to the severity of the prohibition. Rather, he is trusted because she has the ability to become permitted to her husband after her menstrual flow has ceased and she has immersed in a ritual bath. Shall you also say that this is the case with regard to a sota, who potentially does not have the ability to become permitted to her husband due to her suspected adultery? And proof to the notion that people will more readily commit illicit acts that are permanently prohibited comes from the verse that states: "Stolen waters are sweet and bread eaten in secret is pleasing" (Proverbs 9:17). Consequently, there is a concern that the husband will engage in sexual intercourse with his sota wife if not accompanied by scholars.

HALAKHA

They taught only with regard to men of fit morals – אֹלי בְּשֵׁרִין A woman should not seclude herself with several men, unless the wife of one of the men is present. The Rema notes that there are those (Rosh) who hold that while in a town, one woman can seclude herself with two men of fit morals during the day, and he adds that most men meet this standard for purposes of this halakha. If they are in a field any time of the day or in a town at night, there needs to be a minimum of three men of fit morals. Some authorities permit one man to seclude himself with several women, provided that his profession is one that doesn't bring him into constant contact with women (Rambam Sefer Kedusha, Hilkhot Issurei Bia 22:8; Shulhan Arukh, Even HaEzer 22:5).

NOTES

That they know how to warn him – זְּיֵדְיֵנִי לְאֵבְרוּיִינֵי בִּיגֹּר A warning must include the specification of the prohibition that will be transgressed and its punishment, and therefore not all have the knowledge to give a proper warning (see Tosafot).

HALAKHA

They would bring her up to the Sanhedrin, etc. – ביני הַּגְּדוֹל ובר: When the husband and wife arrive at the Sanhedrin in Jerusalem, the court threatens her without her husband present, to encourage her to admit her sin. They also offer words of encouragement, such as: My daughter, wine and frivolity cause much immoral behavior. If she admits her sin or says: I will not drink, she is divorced and forfeits her rights to payment of her marriage contract (Rambam Sefer Nashim, Hilkhot Sota 3:2).

רַבִּי יְהוּדָה אוֹמֵר: מִן הַתּוֹרָה הָאִישׁ מֵבִיא אֶת אִשְׁתּוֹ אֶל הַכּהֵן, שֶׁנֶאֱמַר: ״וָהָבִיא הָאִישׁ אֵת אִשְׁתּוֹ״! The baraita quotes a third opinion. Rabbi Yehuda says: By Torah law,<sup>N</sup> the man alone brings his wife to the Temple, as is stated: "Then shall the man bring his wife to the priest." This baraita states explicitly that Rabbi Yehuda derives this halakha from the verse itself, not from an a fortiori inference.

אֲמַר לְהוּ קַל וָחוֹמֶר בְּרֵישָׁא וּפַּרְכוּה, וַהַדֵר אֲמַר לְהוּ קָרָא. The Gemara answers: Rabbi Yehuda first said to them the a fortiori inference, and they refuted it as mentioned above, and he then said to them the derivation from the verse.

רַבִּי יְהוּדָה הַיְינוּ תַּנָּא קַמָּא! אִיכָּא בִּינֵיהוּ: ״אֵבַל אֵמְרוּ״. The Gemara clarifies: Apparently, the opinion of Rabbi Yehuda is the same as that of the first tanna in the baraita, who also cites the verse as proof that by Torah law the husband alone brings his wife to the priest. The Gemara explains: The difference between them concerns the following clause: But the Sages said that the court provides him with two Torah scholars to accompany him. The first tanna holds that the Sages require two scholars to accompany the husband and wife, while Rabbi Yehuda holds that they do not.

מתני' היו מַעֵּלִין אוֹתָהּ לְבֵית דִּין הַגָּדוֹל שֶׁבִּירוּשָׁלַיִם, וּמְאַיְימִין עָלֶיהָ בַּדָרַךְ שַּמָאִייִמִין עַל עֵדִי נָפְשׁוֹת, MISHNA The mishna details the next stage of the process. They would bring her up to the Sanhedrin<sup>H</sup> that was in Jerusalem, and the judges would threaten her in order that she admit her sin. And this was done in the manner that they would threaten witnesses testifying in cases of capital law. In those cases, the judges would explain to the witnesses the gravity of their testimony by stressing the value of human life. Here too, the judges would attempt to convince the woman to admit her sin, to avoid the loss of her life.

וְאוֹמֵר לָה: בִּתִּי, הַרְבֵּה יַיִּן עוֹשֶׁה, הַרְבֵּה שְּחוֹק עוֹשֶׁה, הַרְבֵּה יַלְדוּת עוֹשָּה, הַרְבֵּה שְׁכֵנִים הָרָעִים עוֹשִׁין. And additionally, the judge would say to her: My daughter, wine causes a great deal of immoral behavior, levity causes a great deal of immoral behavior, and bad neighbors cause a great deal of immoral behavior. The judge encouraged her to admit her sin by explaining to her that he understands that there may have been mitigating factors.

עֲשִׁי לִשְׁמוֹ הַגָּרוֹל שֶנְּכְתַּב בִּקְרוּשָּׁה שֶׁלֹא יִפְּחָה עַל הַפֵּיִם. וְאוֹמֵר לְפָנֶיהָ דְּבָרִים שָׁאֵינָם כְּדֵי לְשוֹמְעָן הִיא וְכָל מִשְׁפַּחַת בֵּית אָבִיהָ. The judge then continues: Act for the sake of His great name, so that God's name, which is written in sanctity, shall not be erased on the water. If the woman admits to having committed adultery, the scroll upon which the name of God is written will not be erased. And additionally, the judge says in her presence matters that are not worthy of being heard by her and all her father's family, in order to encourage her to admit her sin, as the Gemara will explain.

NOTE

Rabbi Yehuda says: By Torah law – יָבְּי יָהוֹדֶה אוֹמֶר מָן הַתּוֹרֶה: The Tosefot HaRosh does not include the phrase: By Torah law, in the statement of the leniency stated by Rabbi Yehuda (see Yagel Ya'akov). This omission seems to be correct, as Rabbi Yehuda holds that this is the halakha also by rabbinic law, not only by Torah law. The version of the text here, which does include this phrase, can be explained according to what is written in the Jerusalem Talmud: Rabbi Yehuda says that despite the logical reasons to the contrary, there is a verse in the Torah teaching that a man is trusted to bring his sota wife to the Temple. Others explain that Rabbi Yehuda's rationale is based on the principle, propounded by the Taz among others, that the Sages did not have the ability to prohibit that which is explicitly permitted in the Torah. Therefore, due to the verse cited by Rabbi Yehuda, the Sages could not prohibit the husband alone to bring her despite the compelling reason for the prohibition.

And this was done in the manner that they would threaten witnesses testifying in cases of capital law – נְּמָאַיִימִין עָלֶיגַדי וְשָׁרְאַיִּמִין עָלֶינַדְ וּשְׁרִּאַיִייִן עָלֶינַדִי וְשָּלִינִדְ עַרְּמַדִּי וְשָׁרְאַיִיִּמִין עַל עַדִי נְפְּשׁוֹת Tosefot Yom Tov explains that this should not be understood to mean that they threaten her with the same threats used in cases of capital law. Rather, just as the court threatens witnesses testifying in cases of capital law in more explicit terms than they do to those testifying in monetary cases, the sota is also extensively threatened. Others explain that since her drinking the bitter water involves possible death for her and her paramour, she is warned exactly as she would be in a case of capital law (Minhat Kenaot).

Her and all her father's family – הָא ְבִּיהָ אָבְיהָ. The Meiri explains that this is a figure of speech, indicating that what is said to her would be difficult for her to hear even if her entire family were present to support her. Rambam, in his Commentary on the Mishna, explains simply that her family is presumably with her and they also hear what is being said.

אָם אָמְרָה טְמֵאָה אֲנִי, שׁוֹבֶרֶת כְּתוּבְּתָה

If after the judge's warning she says: I am defiled, she writes a receipt for her marriage contract. That is, she writes a receipt indicating that she has no claims on her husband with regard to the sum written in her marriage contract, as a woman who admits to adultery forfeits her right to this payment. And she is then divorced from her husband.

וְאָם אָמְרָה טְהוֹרָה אֲנִי, מַעֲלִין אוֹתָהּ לְשַׁעֵר הַמְּזְרָח שָׁעַל פֶּתַח שַּעַר נִקְנוֹר, שֶׁשֶּׁם מַשְּקִין אֶת הַפּוֹטוֹת וּמְטַהֲרִין אֶת היוֹלדוֹת וּמטהרין את המצורעין.

But if after the warning she maintains her innocence and says: I am pure, they bring her up to the Eastern Gate, NH which is at the opening of the Gate of Nicanor, B because three rites were performed there: They give the sota women the bitter water to drink, N and they purify women who have given birth (see Leviticus 12:6–8), and they purify the lepers (see Leviticus 14:10–20).

וְכֹהֵן אוֹחֵז בִּבְגֶדִיהָ, אִם נִקְרְעוּ נִקְּרְעוּ, וְבֹהֵן אוֹחֵז בִּבְגֶדִיהָ, אִם נִקְרְעוּ נִקְּרְעוּ, וְאַם נִפְּרְמוּ נִפְּרְמוּ, עַד שָׁהוּא מְגַלֶּה אָת לְבָּה, וְסוֹתֵר אֶת שְּעֶרָה. רַבִּי יְהוּדָה אוֹמֵר: אִם הָיָה לְבָּה נָאָה לֹא הָיָה מְגַלֵהוּ, וְאָם היה שערה נאה לוֹא היה סוֹתר.

The mishna continues describing the sota rite. And the priest grabs hold<sup>N</sup> of her clothing<sup>H</sup> and pulls them, unconcerned about what happens to the clothing. If the clothes are torn,<sup>N</sup> so they are torn; if the stitches come apart, so they come apart. And he pulls her clothing until he reveals her heart, i.e., her chest. And then he unbraids her hair. Rabbi Yehuda says: If her heart was attractive he would not reveal it, and if her hair was attractive he would not unbraid it.

הָיְתָה מִתְכַּפָּה בִּלְבָנִים, מְכַפָּה בִּשְׁחוֹרִים. הָיָה עָלֶיהָ כְלֵי זָהָב If she was dressed in white<sup>H</sup> garments, he would now cover her with black garments. If she was wearing gold adornments,

NOTES

To the Eastern Gate, etc. – יְלְשֵׁעֵּה הַּמְּוְּרָח וֹכּר: This language is somewhat difficult as two different gates are mentioned, and there are several versions of the text of the mishna. According to Rashi, she is first brought up to the Eastern Gate, which is the outer gate of the women's courtyard, and then she is lead to Gate of Nicanor, which is the gate to the Israelite courtyard. Alternatively, the Kaftor VaFerah explains that the Eastern Gate is the Gate of Nicanor.

Because there they give the sota women to drink – שֶׁשֶּׁם מַשְּׁקוּן The reason lepers and women who have given birth are purified at the Eastern Gate is obvious, as they are still impure and cannot enter further into the Temple. However, the reason the sota drinks there is not clear. It has been proposed that because her hair is uncovered and her clothes torn, it would be disgraceful and improper to bring her into the Temple itself (Minḥa Ḥareva).

And the priest grabs hold – יְּבֹהֵן אוֹהַי: The Tosefta (1:7) states that this priest was chosen by drawing lots, and any priest who is chosen, even the High Priest, is obligated to perform the task.

If the clothes are torn, etc. – אם בקרעו וכר: The Gemara uses two terms to describe the ripping of the clothing, keria and ferima, which are translated in the text as tearing and the forcing apart of stitches respectively, in line with Rabbeinu Ḥananel's explanation of the Gemara. In the context of this Gemara, however, a number of other explanations are given in the commentaries. Rashi explains that keria is ripping one large tear, while ferima means tearing into small pieces. The Meiri and Rambam's Commentary on the Mishna explain that keria is ripping one large tear in the front of the garment and ferima is causing several small tears on the side of the garment. Others explain that keria is a vertical tear and ferima is a lateral tear (Tosefot Yom Tov).

HALAKHA

They bring her up to the Eastern Gate – מַעַלּין אוֹתָה לְשַׁעֵר הַּמְּיֵבְּיוֹ ft the woman insists that she was faithful, she is brought to the Eastern Gate of the Temple courtyard, where she is led to and fro in order to fatigue her, so that she will admit her sin. If she continues to maintain her innocence, she is led to the outside of the Eastern Gate, where she remains standing until the next stage of the process (Rambam Sefer Nashim, Hilkhot Sota 3:3–4).

And they purify the lepers – יְּמְטַהֵּרין אֶת הַמְצוֹרָעִין: During the purification process of a leper, he stands outside the Israelite courtyard, in front of the eastern entrance, at the lintel of the Gate of Nicanor, facing west. This is where all those who have not yet brought an atonement offering to complete the purification process stand at the time they are being purified, and there a sota drinks the bitter water (Rambam Sefer Korbanot, Hilkhot Meḥusrei Kappara 4;2).

The priest grabs hold of her clothing – בְּבֶּבְיִיהָ After God's name is erased into the water, the priest, chosen by lot (Mishne LaMelekh), grabs hold of the clothing of the sota and pulls them off until he exposes her chest, and he uncovers and unbraids her hair (Rambam Sefer Nashim, Hilkhot Sota 3:11).

If she was dressed in white בּיְלְבָּנִים (בְּּלֶבְנִים : If she was dressed in white garments, she would put on black garments. If the black clothing enhances her appearance, she is clothed in garments that cause her to appear unattractive (Rambam Sefer Nashim, Hilkhot Sota 3:4).

BACKGROUND

Gate of Nicanor – ישַּעֵּי נְיְקְנוּר: The Gate of Nicanor is well known for the beauty of its copper doors, as well as for the miracles that occurred while the doors were being transported by ship from Egypt. This gate stood at the main entrance to the Temple, and it was the site of rituals that had to be performed as close to the Temple as possible without being inside the Temple.

Gate of Nicanor

LANGUAGE

Chokers [katliyot] – בְּטְלֵּיאוֹת: The source of this word is the Latin catella, referring to a chain that is hung around the neck.

BACKGROUND

Egyptian rope – יָדֶבֶל מִצְּרִי. This is a coarse rope that is generally fashioned of peels of willow leaves or palm fibers. Some explain that it is a rope that is brought from Egypt (Tosefot Yom Tov).

Dry poison – פַם יָבָשׁ: Most medicines and poisons that are put on the skin do not act until they penetrate into the blood stream. If the skin is unbroken and free from wounds they will remain on the surface and have no effect. In a similar manner, the bitter water will have no effect on a woman who is free from sin.

NOTES

And the Gemara raises a contradiction – וּיְמִינְהוּ: The commentaries note that this is not the standard usage of this term, as there is no contradiction between the mishna and the Tosefta, as the Tosefta merely adds that the sota is also encouraged to drink (Keren Ora). Others add one could even infer this halakha from the wording of the mishna, as it says that the court warns the sota as witnesses are warned in cases of capital law, where the witnesses are warned that they must testify if they know the truth (Torat HaKenaot).

And afterward the priest would bring an Egyptian rope that fishioned from palm fibers, and he would tie it above her breasts.

And anyone who desires to watch<sup>H</sup> her may come to watch, except for her slaves and maidservants,<sup>H</sup> who are not permitted to watch because her heart is emboldened by them, as seeing one's slaves reinforces one's feeling of pride, and their presence may cause her to maintain her innocence. And all of the women<sup>H</sup> are permitted to watch her, as it is stated: "Thus will I cause lewdness to cease out of the land, that all women may be taught not to do after your lewdness" (Ezekiel 23:48).

GEMARA The Gemara asks concerning the halakha that the sota is brought before the Sanhedrin: From where are these matters derived? Rabbi Ḥiyya bar Gamda says that Rabbi Yosei, son of Rabbi Ḥanina, says: This is derived by means of a verbal analogy between the words "tora" and "tora." It is written here, with regard to a sota: "And the priest shall execute upon her all this law [tora]" (Numbers 5:30), and it is written there, with regard to a rebellious Elder, who must go to the place chosen by God and follow the ruling of the Sanhedrin: "According to the law [tora] that they shall teach you" (Deuteronomy 17:11). Just as there the verse is referring to what occurs in the presence of the Sanhedrin of seventy-one judges, so too here, with regard to a sota, the verse is referring to what occurs in the presence of the Sanhedrin of seventy-one judges.

S The mishna teaches: And they threaten her in order that she admit her sin, to obviate the need to erase God's name. And the Gemara raises a contradiction<sup>N</sup> from that which was taught in a baraita in the Tosefta (1:6): In the same manner that they threaten her so that she will not drink, so too, they threaten her so that she will drink, H as they say to her: My daughter, if the matter is clear to you that you are pure, arise for the sake of your clear position and drink. If you are innocent you have nothing to fear, because the bitter water is similar only to a dry poison<sup>B</sup> placed on the flesh. If there is a wound there, the poison will penetrate and enter the blood stream, but if there is no wound there, it does not have any effect. This teaches that the woman is warned not to drink if she is guilty, but if she is not guilty she is encouraged to drink. There is no mention of the latter in the mishna.

The Gemara answers: This is not difficult. Here the mishna is referring to before the scroll was erased, and at that point the woman is warned only not to drink if she is guilty, so that the name of God will not be erased. There the baraita is referring to after the scroll was erased. Then she is warned that if she is innocent she should drink because if she now refuses to drink, it will turn out that the scroll was erased for no purpose.

Nose rings or finger rings, etc. – "בי All the jewelry of the sota is removed in preparation for her drinking (Rambam Sefer Nashim, Hilkhot Sota 3:4).

Would bring an Egyptian rope – בּבִיא חֶבֶּל מְצֵּיִנ. The priest brings an Egyptian rope after he has uncovered her hair and torn her clothes. If an Egyptian rope is not available, he brings a rope of any kind and ties it above her chest so that her clothes won't fall off (Rambam Sefer Nashim, Hilkhot Sota 3:11).

Anyone who desires to watch – בָּל הָרוֹצָה לְּרָאוֹה: Anyone who desires to watch the sota rite may do so (Rambam Sefer Nashim, Hilkhot Sota 3:5).

Except for her slaves and maidservants – חוץ מֵעֶבְּדֶיהָ. The slaves and maidservants of a sota are not permitted to be present during the sota rite, as their presence may embolden her to falsely maintain her innocence (Rambam Sefer Nashim, Hilkhot Sota 3:6).

And all of the women, etc. – יְבֶל הֵּנְשִׁים וּבוֹי: All the women present in the Temple when a sota is given to drink are obligated to watch (Rambam Sefer Nashim, Hilkhot Sota 3:5).

They threaten her so that she will drink – מְאַיִּימִין עָלֶיתָּ: A sota is encouraged to drink. The judges tell her that if she is innocent she need not worry because the bitter water harms only those who sinned (Rambam Sefer Nashim, Hilkhot Sota 4:5).

״וְאוֹמֵר לְפָנֶיהָ״ וכו׳. תָּנוּ רַבְּנַן: אוֹמֵר לְפָנֶיהָ דְּבָרִים שֶׁל הַגָּדָה וּמַעֲשִׁים שֶׁאֵירְעוּ בַּכְּתוּבִים הָרִאשוֹנִים, כְּגוֹן: ״אֲשֶׁר חֲכָמִים יגידוּ ולא כחדוּ מאבותם״. § The mishna teaches: And the judge says in her presence<sup>H</sup> matters that are not worthy of being heard by her and all her father's family in order to encourage her to admit her sin. The Gemara cites a baraita that details what was said. The Sages taught in a baraita: The judge says in her presence words of homiletical interpretation and mentions incidents that happened to previous generations that are recorded in the early prophetic writings. For example, they expound the following verse: "That wise men told and did not hide from their fathers" (Job 15:18); this teaches that even during the time of the forefathers, there were people who admitted their sins despite the shame they incurred.

יְהוּדָה הוֹדָה וְלֹא בּוֹשׁ, מֶה הָיָה סוֹפּוֹ?

נָתַל חַיֵּי הָעוֹלָם הַבָּא. רְאוּבֵן הוֹדָה וְלֹא

בּוֹשׁ, מֶה הָיָה סוֹפּוֹ? נָתַל חַיֵּי הָעוֹלָם

הַבָּא. וּמַה שְּׁכָרָן? מֵה שְּׁכָרָן? כִּדְקֹא

אָמָרִינוַ! אֶלָּא מַה שְּׁכָרָן בְּעוֹלָם הַיָּה?

"לָהֶם לְבַדָּם נִתְּנָה הָאֶרֶץ וְלֹא עָבַר וַרְ

For example, Judah admitted that he sinned with Tamar and was not embarrassed to do so, and what was his end? He inherited the life of the World-to-Come. Reuben admitted that he lay with his father's concubine Bilhah and was not embarrassed, and what was his end? He too inherited the life of the World-to-Come. The Gemara asks: And what is their reward? The Gemara interjects: What is their reward? Their reward was clearly as we say, that they inherited the life of the World-to-Come. The Gemara clarifies: Rather, the second question was: What is their reward in this world? The Gemara answers by citing the next verse in the book of Job: "To them alone the land was given, and no stranger passed among them" (Job 15:19). Judah was given the kingship, and Reuben inherited a portion of land in the Transjordan before the other tribes.

בִּשְׁלֶנֶא בִּיהוּדָה אַשְׁכַּחַן דְּאוֹדֵי, דְּכְתִיב: ״וַיַבֵּר יְהוּדָה וַיֹּאמֶר צָדְקָה מִפֶּנִּי״. אֶלֶּא ראוּבן מנלן דאודי? The Gemara questions the source for Reuben's admission. Granted, with regard to Judah we have found a source that he admitted his sin with Tamar, as it is written: "And Judah acknowledged them and said: She is more righteous than I" (Genesis 38:26). Judah admitted that he was the one who had impregnated Tamar. But from where do we derive that Reuben admitted his sin?

דְּאֶמֵר רַבִּי שְׁמוּאֵל בֵּר נַחְמָנִי אָמֵר רַבִּי יוֹחָנָן, מַאי דִּכְתִיב: ״יְחִי רְאוּבֵן וְאַל יָמֹת. ווֹאת ליהוּדה״? The Gemara answers: It is as Rabbi Shmuel bar Naḥmani says that Rabbi Yoḥanan says: What is the meaning of that which is written concerning Reuben and Judah in Moses' blessing of the tribes at the end of his life: "Let Reuben live and not die in that his men become few" (Deuteronomy 33:6), and immediately afterward, in the following verse, it is stated: "And this for Judah, and he said: Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah, and bring him in unto his people; his hands shall contend for him, and You shall be a help against his adversaries" (Deuteronomy 33:7). What is the connection between the blessing of Reuben and that of Judah, juxtaposed with the conjunction "and"?

בֶּל אוֹתָן שָׁנִים שֶׁהָיוּ יִשְּׁרָאֵל בַּמִּדְבָּר, הָיוּ עַצְמוֹתָיו שֶׁל יְהוּדָה מְגוּלְגָּלִין בָּאָרוֹן, עַד שֶׁעָמֵד משֶׁה וּבִקֵּשׁ עָלָיו רַחֲמִים. אָמֵר לְפָנָיו: רְבוֹנוֹ שֶׁל עוֹלֶם, מִי גָּרַם לִּרְאוּבֵן שַׁהוֹדַה – יְהוּדָה, "ווֹאת לִיהוּדַה"?

Rabbi Yoḥanan says: All those years that the Jewish people were in the desert, the bones of Judah, which the Jewish people took with them from Egypt along with the bones of his brothers, were rolling around in the coffin, until Moses arose and asked for compassion on Judah's behalf. Moses said before God: Master of the Universe, who served as the impetus for Reuben that he admit his sin, through which he merited a blessing and was not excluded from the count of the twelve sons of Jacob (see Genesis 35:22)? It was Judah, as Reuben saw him confess his sin, and thereby did the same. Moses continues in the next verse: "And this for Judah," as if to say: Is this Judah's reward for serving as an example of confessing to one's sins, that his bones roll around?

HALAKH

And the judge says in her presence, etc. – יְאוֹמֵר : When the sota is brought before the court, they tell her: Great and important people were overcome by their desires and transgressed. They recount to her the episodes of Judah and Tamar, Reuben and Bilhah, and Amnon and Tamar, as written in the Bible, without interpretation. This is in order to encourage her to admit her sin (Rambam Sefer Nashim, Hilkhot Sota 3:2).

NOTES

And incidents that happened that are in the early writings, etc. – יבּיב הַרוּבִים הַרְאשׁוֹנְים וכּרוּ Rashi and the Meiri explain this phrase to mean that the priests cite examples of people who admitted their sins. However, the Rambam explains that the priests cite instances where great people sinned in sexual matters, e.g., Judah and Tamar, Reuben and Bilhah, David and Bathsheba, and Amnon and Tamar. This is to encourage the sota to come to terms with her actions if she is guilty so that she will confess.

The Rambam adds that at least some of these stories are told as they are written in the Torah, without the exposition of the Sages, whose interpretations often minimized the severity of the sins, e.g., the priests explain that Reuben only moved his father's bed out of the tent of Bilhah. Apparently, the Rambam understood the mishna's statement: They say matters that she is not worthy of hearing, as meaning that they tell her stories from the Bible in a way in which it is not proper to be heard, i.e., without the rabbinic interpretation. This is especially notable when one takes into consideration that some of these episodes were not translated into Aramaic, the vernacular, when they were publicly taught, as were all other verses (see Megilla 25a).

Who served as the impetus for Reuben that he admit his sin, Judah – בֵּי בָּרִם 'לָרְאוּבְן שֲהוֹיְדָה, יְהוּדָה Although the Sages teach that Reuben fasted and repented to atone for his sin even before the incident with Judah and Tamar, he did not admit his sin in public until he saw Judah do so.

Immediately after Moses prayed, the verse states: "Hear, Lord, the voice of Judah" (Deuteronomy 33:7). His bones then entered their sockets [shafa], and his skeleton was reassembled. But the angels still did not elevate him into the heavenly study hall. Moses then prayed: "And bring him in unto his people" (Deuteronomy 33:7), i.e., those in the heavenly study hall. This prayer was accepted, but he still did not know how to deliberate in Torah matters with the heavenly sages. Moses then prayed: "His hands shall contend for him" (Deuteronomy 33:7), meaning that he should have the ability to contend with them in study. But still he was unable to draw conclusions from his discussion in accordance with the halakha. Moses then prayed: "And You shall be a help against his adversaries" (Genesis 33:7).

בּשְלָמָא יְהוּדָה דְאוֹדֵי, כִּי הֵיכִי דְּלָא תִּישָׁרֵף תָּמָר. אֶלָא רְאוּבֵן לְמָּה לֵיה דְאוֹדֵי? וְהָאֲמֵר רַב שֵׁשֶׁת: חֲצִיף עָלִי דִּמְפָרֵיט חֲטָאֵיה! כִּי הֵיכִי דְּלָא לִיחַשְׁדּוּ אחנדי

The Gemara discusses the propriety of admitting one's sins in public. Granted, with regard to Judah, it was proper that he admitted his sin in public, as he did so in order that Tamar not be burned innocently. But why did Reuben admit his sin in public? But didn't Rav Sheshet say: I consider one who specifies his sins in public to be brazen, He as one who does so indicates that he is not embarrassed by his actions? The Gemara answers: The reason he admitted his sin in public was in order that his brothers should not be suspected of having committed the deed.

״אָם אָמְרָה טְמֵאָה אֲנִי״ וכּו׳. שֶּׁמְעַהְ מִינָה: כּוֹרְבִין שוֹבֵר! § The mishna teaches: If after the judge's warning she says: I am defiled, she writes a receipt for her marriage contract. The Gemara comments: You can learn from this mishna that one writes a receipt to serve as proof that a debt has been paid rather than tearing the promissory note. This matter is the subject of a dispute between the tanna'im in tractate Bava Batra (170b).

אֲמֵר אַבַּיִי, תְּנֵי: מְקְרֵעַת. אֲמֵר לֵיה רָבָא: וְהָא שׁוֹבֶרֶת קָתְנֵי! אֶלֶּא אֲמֵר רָבָא: בְּמָקוֹם שָׁאֵין כּוֹתְבִין כְּתוּבָּה עָסְקִינַן. Abaye said: Teach in the mishna differently. Rather than understanding that she writes a receipt, explain it to mean: She tears<sup>N</sup> her marriage contract. Rava said to him: But the mishna teaches explicitly that she writes a receipt. Rather, to explain the mishna, Rava said: We are dealing with a place in which they do not write a marriage contract, as they rely on the rabbinical ordinance that all wives are entitled to the sum of a standard marriage contract upon divorce or being widowed, even if no marriage contract has been written. Because there is no marriage contract to tear, a receipt is written so that the man can prove that he no longer has a monetary obligation. However, generally, it is possible that the document would be torn, and no proof can be adduced from this mishna.

״וְאָם אָמְרָה טְהוֹרָה אֲנִי, מַעֲלִין אוֹתָה לשערי מורח״. מעלין אוֹתה?

§ The mishna teaches: But if after the warning she maintains her innocence and says: I am pure, they would bring her up to the Eastern Gate. The Gemara asks: Would they bring her up?

NOTE

I consider one who specifies his sins in public to be brazen – אַבְּיִרִים הְּטָבְּיִים הְּטָבְּיִר וּ The Tosefot HaRosh (Berakhot 34b) explains that there is a distinction between a transgression done in public, for which one should confess in public in order to add shame as an element of one's repentance, and a transgression done in private, for which a public admission could be interpreted as a brazen statement that one is not embarrassed by his actions. The lyyun Ya'akov notes that based on the same principle, those condemned to death are told to publicly admit to their sins, for once one has been judged and their sins are now a matter of public record, it is proper to atone publicly.

Teach she tears - יְּהֵנֵי מְקֵרְעַת. While the term shoveret, in the context of documents of monetary obligations, means to write a receipt, Abaye suggests that it should be understood here in line with its more global meaning of breaking. According to this explanation, the mishna would mean that the marriage contract itself is broken, i.e., physically torn (Shita Mekubbetzet).

HALAKHA

I consider one who specifies his sins in public to be brazen – מוס ביי אַנְיי דְּמְבֵּיִי שׁ חֲשָאִיה It is proper that one who repents should admit the details of his sin not only before God, but in public. When is this principle applicable? Only with regard to transgressions against one's fellow man; but with regard to transgressions against God it is an act of brazenness to publicly divulge one's transgressions. According to the Ra'avad and others, if his transgression against God was public knowledge, it is proper that he admit to it in public so as to publicize his repentance. Public confessions that are said by a congregation in unison are not subject to this principle, and may be said in any case (Rambam Sefer HaMadda, Hilkhot Teshuva 2:5; Shulhan Arukh, Orah Ḥayyim 607:2, and in the comment of Rema; see Magen Avraham and Taz there).
